

"My Choices Stoplight"

Used for visual redirection of behavior and consequences to actions.

- With a clothespin, write your child's name on it
- Print out the stoplight page and laminate it for durability
- Each day, have your child start on green by clipping their clothespin to the side of the chart parallel with green, which means to "GO" have a great day!
- For a wrong choice, give them a warning, in which they move their clothespin name to yellow, which stands for "SLOW DOWN."
- If they continue with the behavior, have them move to red and that means to "STOP!"
- Consequences being on red may include one of the following: "Thinking Time", loss of a privilege, no cartoons or video games, or the natural consequence to the wrong action
- If they go the whole day being on green, reward them and lots of praise!
- If they are on yellow for a warning, encourage them they can earn their way back to green if they can show you good choices the rest of the day and correct their behavior.
- This kind of system really helps young children because it allows for them to visually see their choices and what they need to do to correct it, without always being told by you.
